Government agents have discovered a concerted movement to reorganize German sabotage and anti-war propaganda in this country. The movement was broken up and enemy activities now are believed to be confined to sporadic cases carried on largely by pro-German sympathizers without guidance from a central headquarters.

CAN FULTON MATCH UP WITH WILLARD?

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.]
New York, Jan. 10.—Fred Fulton's greatest fault seems to lie in an unsuppressible ability to gum things up for himself just at the moment when things look rosiest.

A year ago Fulton stood out as the logical man to meet Jess Willard for the world's heavyweight championship, but he spoiled his own track when he met Earl Morris in New York. Fulton gained a reputation of being just a trifle yellow as a result of that bout, for he lost on what was declared to be a deliberate foul. Morris was winning by a roughhouse style.

Fulton got another crack at the Oklahoma giant and beat him, so the stigma of the New York bout was wiped away.

Then the lanky challenger again stood out as a probable opponent for Willard. But he gummed it again when he met Bill Tate in Little Rock, for he lost again in the same manner. Now is to meet Tate again and either win or lose fairly. He accomplished a comeback at the expense of Morris, so it shouldn't be impossible for him to repeat against Tate.

As a matter of cold, unbiased fact, Fulton is far the best of Willard's challengers and is the only one who has done well enough to deserve a championship match.

Misfortune or a bad case of nerve is about ready to beat him out of it.

STUDENTS LOSING ATHLETIC CONTROL

Members of the board explained that the change would bring about greater centralization of authority in the handling of athletic affairs and also would effect an economy. Dr. Cooke will receive annual compensation for his new duties.

BADGERS' PLAY GAMES DURING HOLIDAY VACATION

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Jan. 9.—The holiday vacation has been an active one for the varsity basketball team. The last of the pre-conference games was disposed of by defeating Ripon, 35 to 16, on January 2, and the conference season was opened last Saturday when Northwestern defeated the Badgers, 33 to 17. The result of the Northwestern game was not a disappointment for Northwestern has a team of veterans.

Cardinals Defeat Iowa.
Wisconsin defeated Iowa at Iowa City last night by the score of 38 to 22. The game was fast, but very rough. Captain Chandler was the star of the Cardinal team. The big center caged four baskets and made six out of eight free throws. The result of the Iowa game is the true showing of Wisconsin's ability, and it will boost the Badger stock in the conference considerably.

Fred Fulton seems to have lost some little prestige as a result of his bout with Bill Tate when he lost on a foul. Everyone remembers now how much not to say during a fight. He had been in not to say a fight a year or so ago, most of his fights at that time would just when he had started to live down a reputation for a bit of yellow on his back the spots it all in an important fight against an obscure opponent. Fulton has shown that he loses his lead and pulls stug that he no doubt later regrets. It begins to appear that his case is rather hopeless. He has everything in the world that makes a great heavy fighter except the proper fighting spirit. Fulton's chances for the crown and a fight with the title seem so slim now that it's hardly likely he'll ever have the look-in.

Philadelphia report has it that Fred Luders is slated for release by the Philly management and that George Whitfield will be the first base guardian.

Joe Tinker, who played in twenty-two games with his Columbus club during the past season, couldn't hit any better than .148. Not much like the Joe Tinker who was a bugbear for Matty just a few years ago.

With Pfeiffer, Cadore and Smith gone into the service, the Brooklyn club may exercise its options on Wheeler Dell and Ed Appleton, who are on the Robins' reserve list.

Bryan Downey, the Columbus welterweight, seems to have and to have ahead in the past season among the best of the class. His victory over Ted Lewis helped him to this perhaps more than anything else, but he has developed a winning attitude that has the respect of all who meet him. Not a particularly clever boxer and yet he is fast enough to take advantage of most of the openings that appear. Also, he has developed a clever defense. Few fighters have stepped out in front within so short a space of time as young Downey.

Ray Demmitt, former Yankee, is still going strong in the American Association. Demmitt, playing with Columbus last year, swatted the ball at a .319 clip.

Hugh Jennings recently appeared before the city councilmen in Scranton, Pa., where he makes his home, and with a very able speech helped to defeat a measure which would have wiped out the annual appropriation for play grounds for the city's children.

Thirteen of the first twenty batters in the National league last year are outfielders.

John Foster, secretary of the N. Y. Giants, has a collection of baseball pictures in his office that are said to be unsurpassed by any other of the sort in the country. Among other pictures of rare interest to the lover of the game are photographs of all the world's series in which the Giants have had part. The photographs show interesting contrasts in the size of the crowds at the big games of different seasons and there is seen a great difference of course in the world's series of 1905, when the Giants played the Athletics, and the most recent one.

Matty, with several of his players, has organized a bowling team that is entered in a tournament for the championship of Cincinnati. Among the Reds are proficient on the alleys: Red Heinie Groh, Tommy Griffith and Hal Chase. These players are all spending the winter in Cincinnati.

Miss Worthing was unable to get to her school on account of the storm. Miss Nellie Gardner was more fortunate. She got to her school. Only six pupils ventured out.

There was no school Monday in the Letts district. Miss Taylor could not get through. The Royal Neighbors have another class on the way for adoption. Any one wishing to join, please make known, as it is for your own benefit to protect your families.

Sunday morning ushered in the worst storm of the season. A genuine blizzard raged all day and night. The roads were impassable. The milk men were unable to get through Monday. The mail man, Chas. Weaver, on Route 22, did not make the trip on Monday. This is the first time he has missed on account of the roads this winter.

The weekly prayer meeting will be held Wednesday evening at the home of John Barringer. Last Friday night was Royal Neighbors night. A class adoption took place. Four were taken into the ranks. Some of the class were not present. The next regular meeting, much credit is due Mrs. Will Woodstock for the program she had prepared and given by the younger people. Delicious refreshments were served, after which Mr. Keiser, the Woodmen deputy, gave a talk. The men belonging to the R. N. A. were invited to the program and refreshments. A very enjoyable evening was had at the home of W. B. Andrew. It was in the form of a surprise and pound party on Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Bird. The evening passed away very quickly in social discourse and music. Refreshments were served. They received many gifts which will help along the line of eatables, etc.

Well, this snow called a halt on the project of establishing a few skating ponds in the city, but give the street commissioner time to clean away the excess snow and we may have them yet. Meanwhile take your hat off to the officials of the local official who has been able to make such progress under adverse conditions in alleviating the effects in the city of the storm of Saturday and Sunday.

Speaker of the Assembly Whitte, the northern half of Rock county's personal representative at the legislature, paid full tribute and explained the situation that Wisconsin has stood since war was actually declared. His address before the Twilight club was concise and to the point and gave a new version to many of the stories that are going the rounds of the state at present. Rock county has confidence in Mr. Whitte and believes what he says is truth, and will stand by his personal opinion.

Those extra acres of wheat that Rock county grew last year were sufficient to furnish every resident of the county with four for the present year, but now the question is, how many acres will be planted next spring? Time to figure that out now.

More fuel conservation is urged. With winter not really half over, this is needed, but neighbors are going to count the tons of coal that go to individual property owners nowadays after the ruling for one ton only is enforced.

California may be all right, but that climate has its drawbacks as well as other parts of "God's Footstool." Rock county with its snow and ice is a mighty good place to live in.

Fighting has begun on the west front again. Germany makes one report and the allies another, but it is safe to say the allies is near correct.

Well, have you cleaned your walk yet or did you let the city snow plow pass over it and call it a day's work?

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

WHEN MOTHER'S HAPPY. When mother's happy everything is right as right can be. And in her eyes the world seems to sing His sweetest melody.

The children have a gayer smile, And laughter seems their shout, And home seems very much worth while.

When mother trips about, When mother's happy cares depart, And everything is fine, Contentment reigns in every heart.

With joy our faces shine, No burdens seem to weigh us down, No worries make us sad, There's nothing that can start a frown.

Oh, we can laugh at all that frets, And all we have to bear, And put an end to all regrets, If mother has to care.

And just so long as she is gay, And hums her bit of song, The sun is shining all the day, And nothing's very wrong.

But let mother start to grieve, And start to fret and fume, Just let her smiles of gladness leave, And home is robbed in gloom.

Behold the clouds the sun departs, And no one can be glad, For all of us have heavy hearts, Whenever mother's sad.

And so, as father says, our job Is just to live, so she Will never have a cause to sob, Then happy we shall be.

If grief to her we never bring, To fret her day or night, And mother's glad, then everything We do will be all right.

It's plain to see That I can come and I can go Just as I please, and I can know The folks I like.

At will, nor fear a mite, And I have an appetite That no great king can beat. I'm not afraid to say, Nobody makes me snore.

XXVIII. Well, the Whale and Billy Bunny had a lovely time out on the big blue ocean, and as no submarine came near them nothing happened until all of a sudden the Whale ran on a coral reef where there were three pretty mermaids combing their hair with pearly combs.

They were so glad to see a little white rabbit that they told the Whale they would give him a box of candy if he would leave Billy Bunny with them for a playfellow. And another day at tail land bigger than Billy Bunny's. Which made the Whale laugh so hard that he split the coral island right in two, and one of the mermaids fell in the water and got all wet.

Then she tickled the Whale until he cried, and if Billy Bunny hadn't asked her to stop I don't know what would have happened.

Then the mermaids took Billy Bunny into their Coral Castle and showed him lots and lots of lovely shells. One they gave him was just like a whistle, and when you blew on it it made a lovely sound.

"Good-by," cried Billy Bunny, and he hopped on just in time, for the Whale is a very impatient sort of a fish and never waits for anybody except his own wife.

Then the little rabbit stood up on was to have been on Monday evening, but has been postponed until next Monday evening.

"I want an American flag," said Billy Bunny quickly. (And if he doesn't get it in the next story I'll have my tailor man make him one.)

The best remedy is one you can easily make at home. Cheap, but very effective.

Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether. This ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also promptly loosens a dry or tight cough, stops the troublesome throat tickle, soothes the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes, and relief comes almost immediately. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and for bronchitis, asthma there is nothing better. It tastes pleasant and keeps perfectly.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is used by millions of people every year for throat and chest colds with splendid results.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The YUKON TRAIL

A Tale of the North

By William MacLeod Raine

(Copyright by William MacLeod Raine)

CHAPTER XX.

In the Blizzard. "Swiftwater" Pete, the driver of the stage between Kusluk and Kanna, did not like the look of the sky as his ponies breasted the long uphill climb that ended at the pass. "Gittin' her back up for a blizzard, looks like. Doggone it, if that wouldn't jest be my luck," he murmured fretfully.

Sheba hoped there would be one, not of course, a really, truly blizzard such as Macdonald had told her about, but the tail of a make-believe one, enough to send her glowing with exhilaration into the roadhouse with the happy sense of an adventure achieved. The girl was buoyed up by a sense of freedom. For a time, at least, she was as happy as a child. The driving energy, the appeal of Gordon Elliot's warm friendliness, and the unvoiced urging of Dina, good old Peter and the kid-dies were the only ones that let her alone.

She looked back at the horses laboring up the hill. Swiftwater had got down and was urging them forward, his long whip crackling about the ears of the leaders. He was worried. He would have liked to turn and run for it. But the last roadhouse was twenty-seven miles back. If the blizzard came howling down the slope they would have a sweet time of it reaching safety. Smith's Crossing was on the other side of the divide, only nine miles away. They would have to worry through somehow.

Miss O'Neill knew that Swiftwater Pete was anxious, and though she was not yet afraid, the girl understood the reason for it. The road ran through the heart of a vast snow-field, the surface of which was being swept by a screaming wind. The air was full of silted white dust, and the road furrow was rapidly filling. Soon it would be obliterated. Sheba tramped behind the stage-driver and in her tracks walked Mrs. Olson, the other passenger.

Through the muffled scream of the storm Swiftwater shouted back to Sheba, "You wanta keep close to me." She nodded her head. His order needed no explanation. The world was narrowing to a lane whose walls she could almost touch with her fingers. A pall of white wrapped them. Upon them beat a wind of stinging sleet. Nothing could be seen but the blurred outlines of the stage and the driver's figure.

The bitter cold searched through Sheba's furs to her soft flesh and the blast of powdered ice beat upon her face. The snow was getting deeper as the road filled. Once or twice she stumbled and fell. Her strength ebbed, and the hinges of her knees gave up, and she lay beneath her. How long expected herself, that Macdonald had said men could live in a blizzard?

Staggering blindly forward, Sheba bumped into the driver. He had drawn up to give the horses a moment's rest before sending them plunging at the snow again.

"No chance," he called into the young woman's ear. "Never make Smith's in the world. Goin' try for mine's cabin up gulch little way."

The team stuck in the drifts, fought through, and was blocked again ten yards beyond. A dozen times the horses gave up, answered the sting of the whip by diving head first at the white banks, and were stopped by fresh snow-combs.

Pete gave up the fight. He began unhitching the horses, while Sheba and Mrs. Olson, clinging to each other's hands, stumbled forward to join him. The words he shouted across the back of a horse were almost lost in the roar of the shrieking wind.

"...heluvatime...ride...gulch," Sheba made out.

He flung Mrs. Olson astride one of the wheelers and helped Sheba to the back of the right leader. Swiftwater clambered upon its mate himself.

The girl paid no attention to where they were going. The urge of life was so faint within her that she did not greatly care whether she lived or died. Her face was blue from the cold, her vitality was sapped. She seemed to herself to have turned to ice below the hips. Numb though her fingers were she must keep them fasttened tightly in the frozen mane of the animal. She recited her lesson to herself like a child. She must stick on—she must—she must.

Whether she lost consciousness or not Sheba never knew. The next she realized was that Swiftwater Pete was pulling her from the horse. He dragged her into a cabin where Mrs. Olson lay crunched on the floor.

"Got to stable the horses," he explained, and left them. After a time he came back and lit a fire in the sheet-iron stove. As the circulation that meant life flooded back into her chilled veins Sheba endured a half-hour of excruciating pain. She had to clench her teeth to keep back the groans.

The cabin was empty of furniture except for a home-made table, rough stools, and the frame of a bed. The last occupant had left a little firewood beside the stove, enough to last perhaps for twenty-four hours. Sheba did not need to be told that if the blizzard lasted long enough, they would starve to death. In the handbag left in the stage were a box of candy and an Irish plum pudding. She had brought the latter from the old country with her and was taking it and the chocolates to the Husted children. But just now the stage was as far from them as Drogheda.

Like many rough frontiersmen, Swiftwater Pete was a diamond in the raw. So far as could be made a hopeless and impossible situation comfortable. His judgment told him that they were caught in a trap from which there was no escape, but for the sake of the women he put a cheerful face on things.

"Lucky we found this cabin," he growled amiably. "By this time we'd 'a' been up Salt creek if we hadn't. Seeing as our luck has stood up so far, I reckon we'll be all right. Mighty kind of Mr. Last Tennant to leave us this firewood. We ain't so worse off." "If we only had some food," Mrs. Olson suggested.

"Food?" Pete looked at her in assumed surprise. "Fib! What about all that live stock I got in the stable? I've heard tell, ma'am, that broncho tenderloin is a favorite dish with them there French chefs that do the cooking. They kinder trim it up so's it's 'most as good as frangs' legs."

Sheba had never before slept on bare boards with a sealskin coat for a sleeping bag. But she was very tired and dropped off almost instantly. Twice she woke during the night, disturbed by the stiffness and the pain of her body. When she awakened for the third time it was morning.

It seemed to her that the hard, whipsawed planks were pushing through the soft flesh to the bones. She was cold, too, and crept closer to the stout Swedish woman lying beside her. Presently she fell asleep again to the sound of the blizzard howling outside. When she awakened for the third time it was morning.

In the afternoon the blizzard died away. As far as the eye could see, Sheba looked out upon a waste of snow. Her eyes turned from the desolation without to the bare and cheerless room in which they had found shelter. In spite of herself a little shiver ran down the spine of the girl. Had she come into this Arctic solitude to find her tomb?

As soon as the storm had moderated enough to let him go out with safety, Swiftwater Pete had taken one of the horses for an attempt at trail breaking.

"Me, I'm after that plum pudding. I gotta get a feed of oats from the stage for my bronchos too. The scenery here is sure fine, but it ain't what you would call nourishing. Huh! Watch our smoke when me and old Baldface git to bucking their drifts."

He had been gone two hours and the dusk was already descending over the white waste when Sheba ventured out to see what had become of the stage driver. But the cold was so bitter that she soon gave up the attempt to fight her way through the drifts and turned back to the cabin.

Some time later Swiftwater Pete came stumbling into their temporary home. He was fagged to exhaustion but triumphant. Upon the table he dropped from the crook of his numbed arm two packages.

"The makings for a Christmas dinner," he said with a grin.

Mrs. Olson thawed out the pudding and the chocolates in the oven and made a kind of mush out of some oats Pete had saved from the horse feed. They ate their one-sided meal in high spirits. The freeze had saved their lives. If it held clear till tomorrow they could reach Smith's crossing on the crust of the snow.

Swiftwater broke up the chairs for fuel and demolished the legs of the table, after which he lay down before the stove and fell at once into a sodden sleep.

Presently Mrs. Olson lay down on the bed and began to snore regularly. Sheba could not sleep. The boards tipped her bones and she was cold.

Sometimes she slipped into cat naps that were full of bad dreams. When she awakened with a start it was to find that the fire had died down. She was shivering from lack of cover. Quietly the girl replenished the fire and lay down again.

When she awakened with a start it was morning. A faint light sifted through the single window of the shack. Sheba whispered to the older woman that she was going out for a little walk.

As she worked her way down the gulch Sheba wondered whether the news of their loss had reached Kusluk. Were search parties out already to rescue them? Colby Macdonald had gone into the blizzard years ago to save her father. Perhaps he might have been out all night trying to save her father's daughter. Peter would go, of course—and Gordon Elliot. The work to the mines would stop and men would volunteer by scores. That was one fine thing about the North. It responded to the unwritten law that a man must risk his own life to save others.

Dinner Stories

Slocumbe Pogis is not a gay place and the commercial traveler was hard put to it to discover some means of whiling away the evening. In the bar of the only hotel he entered into conversation with its solitary occupant, a railway porter.

"Anything going on here just now?" he asked. "Picture palace, lecture, political meeting or anything amusing?" The porter stroked his chin reflectively. "Well—er—no; nothing of that kind. But—Ah, now I come to think of it, we're loading a freight train this evening down at the station at about 10 o'clock. If you care to come and look on!"

A traveler tells of a trip on a jaunty car in Ireland, where he had as a fellow passenger an ugly looking man, whom he was not sorry to leave behind at an inn.

"That was a queer looking fellow. Pat," he remarked to the waggish driver as he proceeded on his way. "Faith, yer honor, he's as queer as he looks. He's a vulgus. He's done fifteen years for having his wife without visible means of support."

"Oh, get out, Pat! A man can't get fifteen years' penal servitude for leaving his wife without visible means of support." "Shure, and can't he, sir?" said Pat, with a twinkle in his roguish eyes. "He did, though. And head, isn't it? leaving yer wife without visible means of support when ye throw her out of a window on the third floor?"

"What's the matter, little microbe?" inquired the typhoid germ. "I'm utterly discouraged," replied the anthrax bacillus. "Here I am employed in the military service of a great emperor. Even if I earn the iron cross I'm not big enough to wear it."

Jerked Meats. "In South America jerked or dried meat is known variously as tassajo or tassajo, and jerked venison is prepared and used by mountain dwellers in the Rockies and our southern mountain ranges. In South Africa these dried meat products are known as biltong."
